I find the XM Instant Traffic and Weather a valuable service which I am gladly willing to PAY for. It not only gives me local traffic, but the weather and traffic conditions in cities which I am traveling with schedules to meet. Local radio cannot provide this service.

I see no difference between XM providing traffic and weather information to subscribers as opposed to having this the exclusive right of local radio stations, than The Weather Channel providing local weather forecasts on cable television in markets where weather is also provide on local news programs on the conventional broadcast networks.
